FROM THE FOUNDATION PRESIDENT

Craig Mohre

President, The New Albany Community Foundation

Thank you for supporting the Foundation's 2021 Remarkable Evening!

We're particularly grateful that you've continued to support the Foundation's annual benefit through these times when we can't gather in person. We're optimistic that next year we'll all be together again, but please know that even now you're having an impact every day in transformational ways through your support.

New Albany Student Lecture Series featuring Michael Phelps

Here are just a few highlights from 2021 that I wanted to share. The Foundation surpassed $20 million in grants this year – quite an accomplishment for you as donors and for a relatively young Foundation. About $200,000 of those grants were devoted to COVID assistance that provided much needed help to families who have struggled with food insecurity or with mental health services. Your dollars also provided essential PPE equipment for local healthcare workers, first responders and the schools. In addition, the lecture series was able to reach more people than ever before through the use of a virtual platform, surpassing 22,000 students who have interacted with influential thought leaders.

This year also marked the long-anticipated debut of the Charleen & Charles Hinson Amphitheater. Hundreds of residents and students participated in the dedication of this beautiful new venue. Not long after, Tony Award winner and Academy Award nominee, Leslie Odom, Jr. wowed the audience for the inaugural “Amp Up the Arts” benefit. We're looking forward to sharing more wonderful moments in the new amphitheater. In fact, we're already working on next summer's performance series. Stay tuned for an announcement about the 2022 schedule!

We are so thankful to all of the Foundation donors and sponsors who make all of these “remarkable” things happen in New Albany and beyond every day! With a clear vision for the future, strong board leadership and a steadfast commitment to serve its donors, the Foundation will continue to help build and support this extraordinary community so many of us call home.

With appreciation,

*Craig Mohre, President
The New Albany Community Foundation*

A REMARKABLE GUEST

Dr. Jennifer Doudna

2020 Nobel Prize Winner in Chemistry

We're all about your community. Because it's ours, too.

Every day, while we're bustling about our lives, it can be easy to get so focused that we forget to stop and appreciate this place: our community. At Huntington, we see it as our responsibility to not just appreciate Central Ohio, but to always be looking for ways to make it better. That's why we're making a number of investments right here. Check them out at huntington.com/Community. Because when our communities thrive, we all live better.

Jennifer Doudna, PhD is a biochemist at the University of California, Berkeley. Her groundbreaking development of CRISPR-Cas9 — a genome engineering technology that allows researchers to edit DNA — with collaborator Emmanuelle Charpentier earned the two the 2020 Nobel Prize in Chemistry and forever changed the course of human and agricultural genomics research. She is also the founder and President of the Innovative Genomics Institute, the Li Ka Shing chancellor's chair in Biomedical and Health Sciences, and a member of the Howard Hughes Medical Institute, Lawrence Berkeley National Lab, Gladstone Institutes, the National Academy of Sciences, and the American Academy of Arts and Sciences. She is a leader in the global public debate on the responsible use of CRISPR and has co-founded and serves on the advisory panel of several companies that use the technology in unique ways. Doudna is the co-author of "A Crack in Creation," a personal account of her research and the societal and ethical implications of gene editing.

Meta, Google and other leading tech companies all saw the same thing in New Albany.

The future.

They saw a business park with a clear vision of tomorrow. They saw the strength of our technological infrastructure. They saw one of the nation's most robust and affordable fiber optic networks, triple electric feeds and the power of tremendous bandwidth.

They saw what every company wants when looking for a new home. A place that delivers the resources they need to grow. To thrive. And look ahead with confidence. The New Albany International Business Park. Where will your business be tomorrow?

The New Albany International Business Park and its Information and Technology Cluster are home to a growing list of leading mission critical facilities. We invite you to join them.

REMARKABLE HONOREES

Patti & Steve Steinour

2021 Recipients of the Jeanne and John G. McCoy Community Service Award

It's not just a shared vocation of banking that ties Patti and Steve Steinour with Jeanne and John G. McCoy, namesakes of The New Albany Community Foundation's Community Service Award established in 2004. It is more how the Steinours, like the McCoy's, have a history of investing their time and talents in developing human capital.

The Steinours have been part of the New Albany community since 2009, when Steve was appointed Chairman, President and CEO of Huntington Bancshares Incorporated. Moving here from Philadelphia, they brought their two, then-teenage children and continued a lifetime of impactful community service.

Patti and Steve Steinour at Remarkable Evening

Together, Patti and Steve are a formidable force. Matt Habash, President & CEO of the Mid-Ohio Food Collective reflected on the Steinours' involvement in the Collective's campaign to re-imagine ending hunger, which was launched just before the pandemic took hold worldwide. "We had expected to run a three-year effort. Too slow for Steve and Patti! Through their drive and urgency to get the dollars to work in our community as quickly as possible, their passion and compassion for those who needed us – now more than ever – and their no-nonsense approach in keeping our focus on what matters, we met goal in about a third of that projected journey. We are so incredibly grateful to these two extraordinary leaders who set the pace, the power and the promise that all in our communities will know what it means to have nutritious meals on their tables for their families."

Their individual efforts to make a difference are notable as well.

With more than 30 years as a community volunteer in Boston, Providence, Philadelphia and Columbus, Patti has championed causes focused on affordable housing and literacy. Patti served as a board member of The New Albany Community Foundation for eight years and chaired its grant committee. She also established the New Albany Coffee Club, a group of friends who supported low-income families experiencing financial hardship due to unforeseen circumstances such as health issues, loss of employment or loss of a spouse.

Patti and Steve Steinour at the Mid-Ohio Food Collective

"I met Patti through her Coffee Club and was immediately struck by how selfless and caring she is," said Angela Douglas, Executive Director of Healthy New Albany. "From the very beginning, Patti supported and advocated for the New Albany Food Pantry, helping secure a grant from the Foundation that allowed us to purchase a freezer. This was a game changer for the pantry and just one of many examples of Patti's willingness to step forward and help people in need."

Patti Steinour at the New Albany Food Pantry

Through Patti's leadership and hands-on fundraising efforts, the Plain Township Fire Department was able to update and significantly improve the kitchen used daily by the firefighters and staff. "The kitchen is a place where we come together as a team to bond and relieve stress. To have Mrs. Steinour step forward and rally the community to take up the cause of updating this important area for the Fire Department was simply incredible. It makes our department feel appreciated and cared for by the community," said Chief Jack Rupp of the Plain Township Fire Department.

Patti is also active with TWIG-3, a fundraising arm of Nationwide Children's Hospital, and she is a founder of the Community Shelter Board Women Leaders Group.

As the CEO of Huntington, Steve supports causes that address economic, social, environmental and racial equity challenges.

"Without Steve, the Columbus Urban League would not be able to make the strides it is making today to empower African Americans and disenfranchised groups through economic, educational and social progress," said Stephanie Hightower, President and CEO of the Columbus Urban League. “What’s really extraordinary about Steve is his personal effort to inspire others to be a part of problem-solving. Together with Patti, he is out in the trenches doing the work, and that is saying something about a CEO of a major corporation.”

Many other nonprofit organizations have benefited from Steve’s leadership, including The Ohio State University Wexner Medical Center and Pelotonia, where he is a fixture at the launch every year, cheering on volunteers and riders as they embark on their ride for cancer research at The OSU Comprehensive Cancer Center and Solove Research Institute.

Valuing expanded educational opportunities for first-time college students in particular, Steve who is a former Eagle Scout, has provided transformational scholarship funds for central Ohio students.

Steve also devotes time to regional and statewide economic development organizations that contribute to a stronger community including the Columbus Partnership, the Ohio Business Roundtable and The Columbus Downtown Development Corporation.

“Patti and Steve embody the spirit of the McCoy Community Service Award,” said Craig Mohre, President of The New Albany Community Foundation. “When I think of the impact Jeanne and John G. had in Columbus and New Albany, Patti and Steve are operating very much in that same way. They’re strategic, they’re compassionate and they care.”

The Jeanne and John G. McCoy Community Service Award is bestowed annually on a person or persons whose accomplishments, contributions and community service have made significant positive impact in keeping with the Foundation’s mission. Whether it’s through Huntington’s community engagement and leadership or rolling up their sleeves in the community, Steve and Patti demonstrate daily that they are more than willing to give what it takes to build an extraordinary community. ~

The Steve and Cindy Rasmussen Institute for Genomic Medicine at Nationwide Children’s:

- Provides critically ill children and newborns with suspected genetic conditions rapid-turn around whole genome sequencing analysis to determine their best care
- Offers children with certain cancers genome analysis to identify their best treatment options
- Provides answers to families whose children have previously undiagnosed conditions through a rare disease diagnosis protocol
- Has developed a new genomics and behavioral health study to better understand the causes of conditions such as bipolar disease and suicidality/depression

Genomic medicine is a cornerstone of the integration of clinical care and research at Nationwide Children’s, transforming how we care for patients in central Ohio and around the world.

New Albany Startup Raises $100M, Names Lower.com Field

Lower.com is helping people build wealth through homeownership. Backed by Accel's $100M investment—marking the largest Series A in Ohio history—Lower's mobile-driven products make the mortgage experience easy.

Making homeowners has created more opportunities for the company as well. CEO Dan Snyder called naming the Columbus Crew's new stadium Lower.com Field a "once-in-a-lifetime opportunity." Teaming up with the hometown champs has felt like a dream. But, as every Lower employee knows, dreams are real.

Glassdoor and Fortune have awarded Lower as a top workplace multiple times. While the recognition is nice, being a part of something big and helping homeowners is what really matters to the team members. That's where their hustle thrives. Keep up with everything they're doing over at Lower.com.

Foundation as it connects people, ideas and resources to make extraordinary things happen in New Albany.

REMARKABLE IMPACT

Giving is its own reward. Sometimes it also has tangible results. New Albany is a case study in what can be achieved by a community that develops a strong culture of caring.

When The New Albany Community Foundation was established in 1995, few residents could imagine someday building an amphitheater in the Village Center. Few dared to dream of a performing arts venue that hosts hundreds of events each year. The idea of a public library, let alone a library garden, was still a long shot. No thought of upgrading the athletic field of the high school stadium. It was almost impossible to conceive of restoring the once-forlorn Rose Run as a beautiful park with a majestic pedestrian bridge connecting Market Square with the Learning Community Campus.

In the past 25 years, New Albany has accomplished all this and more. The community has learned how to imagine new possibilities—and turn vision into reality. Each new milestone highlights the generosity of local families and companies, as well as the importance of collaboration among public and private entities.

Even amid the trials of the global pandemic, the community has worked together to support neighbors in need. With an eye toward the future, the Foundation continues to organize transformative community investments in lifelong education, the arts, health and wellness, and environmental sustainability.

Charlotte P. Kessler Library

It was in 2002 that the community first unleashed its capacity to build. Together with the Columbus Metropolitan Library, the Foundation raised funds to build and open the New Albany branch library. The Kessler Family, headed by Charlotte and Jack Kessler, gave a leadership gift that helped inspire others to contribute, too. Dedicated in 2003, the Charlotte P. Kessler Library became one of the most used branches in the system. A tribute to Charlotte's longtime advocacy for libraries, it's also the civic and architectural anchor of Market Square.

Charleen & Charles Hinson Amphitheater

In September 2021, the Foundation was thrilled to dedicate the Charleen & Charles Hinson Amphitheater. Conveniently adjoining The McCoy, this open-air theater provides an intimate garden setting for performing arts and events in New Albany's Village Center. The opening of this wonderful cultural space reflects the generosity of the Hinson family and many other contributors, and our ongoing collaboration with public entities. Conceived as a fusion of architecture and landscape, the amphitheater features lush greenery and a timber bandshell canopy facing a series of flexible audience seating areas. Classical architectural details are paired with natural materials and warm amber lighting to create a magical atmosphere, welcoming audiences of all ages.

Marie Luise & Michael Marx Family Reading Garden

Earlier this year, another civic asset debuted at the library. The Marie Luise & Michael Marx Family Reading Garden is a peaceful, reflective space nestled between the library and Rose Run Park. Café tables and chairs, a fountain and a beautiful lawn invite visitors to relax in a beautiful setting. As New Albany city leaders long envisioned, and thanks to the Marx Family's substantial gift, community members can now stroll easily from the library garden to Rose Run Park, the green corridor in the center of town.

Raines Crossing

Spanning Rose Run Creek is Raines Crossing, a graceful bridge and promenade that connects the learning community campus with the library and Market Square. Made possible by a leadership gift from Sandy Raines and Ron Cadieux, it's a beautiful work of architecture that makes the park safer and more inviting for students and residents of all ages. Enhanced trails, play areas, and scenic overlooks, beautifully planned by the City, allow community members to explore and enjoy the restored natural waterway as never before.

Jeanne B. McCoy Community Center for the Arts

The Hinson Amphitheater has a special kinship with its next-door neighbor, The Jeanne B. McCoy Community Center for the Arts, dedicated in 2008, prefigured the Hinson Amphitheater in placing the arts at the heart of the community. The McCoy has been the community's gathering place for all manner of performances and educational events, including the Foundation's perennially sold-out New Albany Lecture Series. It was made possible by a leadership gift from John G. McCoy in honor of his late wife, Jeanne, who loved the arts and education. Exemplifying public-private partnership, The McCoy serves a tremendous array of community members, drawing audiences from New Albany and beyond.

Philip Heit Center for Healthy New Albany

Health and wellness are core values to so many community members. Phil Heit, a holistic health and fitness advocate, founded the New Albany Walking Club and the nonprofit Healthy New Albany. These initiatives in turn gave rise to the local farmers market, community garden, and Healthy New Albany magazine. After the City of New Albany built the Philip Heit Center for Healthy New Albany in 2014, Phil donated his time to lead this multi-faceted organization. He and his wife Sheryl Heit also donated funds to endow its

Veterans Field

The Foundation was honored to facilitate a campaign led by a group of New Albany families to raise funds to install an all-weather turf field at New Albany High School. With improved drainage and “bounce,” the new surface has allowed more athletic clubs and the band to practice and perform on the field year-round. Many parents and others donated to this successful campaign. When Jackie and Ken Krebs made a leadership gift, they opted to name the stadium “Veterans Field” in honor of military veterans in their families and across the community.

Grassroots Efforts

It’s not just the largest philanthropic initiatives that define our community. Smaller, grassroots efforts also illustrate the way New Albany comes together to make a difference. Among many such inspiring examples are the Miracle League of New Albany, which allows differently abled children to play baseball on an accessible field, and the Michael Lucey Memorial Courts, named in tribute to a local student athlete who died tragically. Several community groups have also raised funds to preserve and restore historic architectural landmarks like the Ealy House along Rose Run Creek and the Phelps House in the Village Center. In these and other philanthropic endeavors, the community has shown great character.

Giving Forward

New Albany’s culture of giving would not be what it is today without Abigail and Les Wexner. When the Wexners made New Albany their home, they dreamed of a community where people not only live well, but also invest in others’ well-being. Their contributions to New Albany over the years include land for schools and parks, funding for community initiatives, and hosting the Foundation’s annual Remarkable Evening Benefit. More than giving back, they aim to “give forward” to benefit generations to come. The Foundation acknowledges the Wexners’ many generous contributions as well as their role in cultivating a widespread culture of giving and mutual care that transcends any single donor.

These are just a few of the milestones that show the community’s commitment to shared vision and transformative impact. With continued generosity, hard work and collaboration, there is no limit to what New Albany can dream of and accomplish. ~

THE WORK OF THE FOUNDATION LIVES HERE.

IN OUR SUPPORT OF THE ARTS AND THE IMPACT THEY CREATE.

Each day, we strive to move this extraordinary community forward. By stimulating meaningful conversation. Encouraging lifelong learning. And providing nearly 10 million dollars in grants to support the arts that bring us together. This year we applauded the opening of the Charleen & Charles Hinson Amphitheater, a new cultural landmark in New Albany’s Village Center.

Inspire. Enrich. Impact.
